APA NEWS February 2015

The APA has started 2015 with many changes in procedures. These were printed the News & Views. If you haven't received your copy by now, please let me know. Any time things change it takes a little time to adjust.

The yearbook committee is already working on advertising for the 2015 yearbook. The News & Views has listed the individual and club ad prices, which did not increase from last year. Many thanks go to Ruth Caron who has designed a Media Package for this years advertising. She has put in many hours working to promote the book and I am sure she will put in many more before it goes to print. The committee is also looking for articles, there is a lot of knowledge among APA members, if you have time, please put pen to paper and share your knowledge in the yearbook. We have many new members who want to learn but they need someone to help them. There are also some new shows in Mississippi, please support them when you can.

Dues renewals are coming in at a good rate. I am receiving a lot thru paypal, which is faster for everyone. Don't forget to update your contact information. Associate members, if you have changed officers, please let me know if there is a new contact person or address.

Sales are going well, as I write this in January, I have already sent out 38 Standard of Perfection books, so I had better get back to processing and shipping.

I wish everyone a good hatching season, may you raise only champions.

Until next month, enjoy the rest of the Poultry Press.

Pat Horstman, Secty.

ABA Happenings February 2015

Hello All – I do hope that everyone is taking care with their birds this winter. For those of us in the north, winter is a time of extra work. So KUDOS to all of you doing the chores and keeping your birds happy and healthy. There are many little tips to help you through the darkness. Extra bedding, extra scratch at night, clean coops, wind breaks, and heat all work great. I invite all ABA members to take a little time and send me an email of housing tips. These can be winter/summer/fall/or spring. I am working on a special project and will share these “tidbits” in the next yearbook. PLEASE PLEASE – we cannot do this alone, and I know there is lots of good advice out there. Send them all in – this is how we can gather and organize this stuff for the next generation of fanciers.

Yearbook? Yes – the time of year is here. It is time to send those ads in. I have sent tear sheets to those who took an ad last year. May 1st is the deadline for inclusion and Kim and I plan to stick to that deadline if possible. Let's make this year's book even better than last years. We have big plans which include “keeping” that great coated paper which makes all the pictures pop off the page. It is time for a real parade of bantams, so let's get those cameras out and send in those photos for those ads. It is the year of the Bantam according to the ABA Almanac. The rates for this year's book are as follows:

½ page B/W $ 75	Color $125
¼ page B/W $ 50	Color $ 75
1/8 page B/W $ 25	Color $ 50
Judges Ad B/W $ 35

The Centennial Standard is available now. Get yours at bantamclub.com. $45.00 plus $5 shipping and handling will have it to you via USPS. It is a showpiece of a book for your library and/or coffee table. You really should consider the 2014 mini version at the nominal $20.00. These are perfect for the showroom and chicken house. These are also available on the website. Each printing of the Bantam standard includes the most up to date information on the breeds and varieties that are currently accepted. This information does change and we should all be up to date.

Special One-Year Packages: Any ad run for a full year, with only minor text changes throughout the year, PRE-PAID in full, is 50% off the single insertion rate. Example: An ad this size, run for one year (12 issues) is only $262 (1/2 the regular price).

The 2015 legbands are shipping now as well. Sizes are D(10mm), E (11mm), F (13mm), G (15mm), H (18mm), I (20mm), J (22mm), K (25mm). A listing of suggestions for your breed is available online and in the 2014 standards. Get yours before they run out. .38 ea plus a $5.00 shipping and handling charge per order. These bands are increasing in popularity and are a must have for your breeding program. They list a unique identifying number as well as the year (15) which helps you keep track of the age of your birds. They are placed on the young birds at somewhere between 6-8 weeks of age. Once on, they are permanent.

2015 is an election year for the ABA. We have sent ballots to 2 districts where there was a race. These are being calculated and the results will be sent via email to all the paid up ABA members.

The Rhode Island Red:

An Ideal Chicken Breed for Urban, Suburban and Rural Settings

By Brian Reeder

As poultry keeping increases in popularity in many diverse settings there is a need for potential keepers to decide which breeds best suit their needs and environment. One very popular and highly suitable breed is the Rhode Island Red. A breed in the American class, the Rhode Island Red is a dual-purpose breed with a long history of providing large numbers of brown eggs and excellent meat for the table. This hardy, calm and easily kept breed is an excellent choice for use in urban, suburban and rural settings. As well, the Rhode Island Red is readily available, inexpensive and attractive.

The origin of the Rhode Island Red is unique among the American breeds and goes back into the mid-nineteenth century in the states of Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Early imports of Chinese and other Asian landraces such as Cochin Chinas and Malay Games contributed significantly to the development of this American breed. These imported birds were bred with local fowl to produce the earliest lines of Rhode Island Reds. Through a breeding practice known as backcrossing (a form of outcrossing) the developing flocks of Rhode Island Reds were repeatedly bred to the best examples of the imported Cochin and Malay males over a course of many years. This system of breed development led to a high level of vigor in the new breed.

The Rhode Island Red has a great deal of genetic diversity due to the many years of development through backcrossing to vigorous Asian landrace fowl. Such diversity ensures that the breed shows great vigor. The Rhode Island Red has also been a popular breed since its introduction and this has ensured that they have been bred in large numbers. For this reason, inbreeding depression is rare in most Rhode Island Red lines. In addition, Rhode Island Reds often show considerable disease resistance to many commonly encountered poultry pathogens including Mycoplasma gallisepticum and Marek's Virus. The combination of vigor, production, disease resistance and beauty makes for a very desirable breed that is a joy to care for.

Commercial type Rhode Island Reds from Murray McMurray Hatchery.

Queen Victoria's original Cochin Chinas from the 1840's.

The Rhode Island Red is still a vigorous and productive breed. It owes this to the unique manner of its development. Rhode Island Reds, of all the commonly available brown egg laying production breeds, show exceptional egg producing abilities with hens regularly laying 200 to 300 eggs per year. For those looking for hens to produce brown eggs, the Rhode Island Red is one of the very best choices available. In addition to the fine production of brown eggs, and being a calm and hardy bird, the Rhode Island Red is also a beautiful bird that is easy to manage.

When you consider that the breeds involved in the development of the Rhode Island Red included the calm, gentle giants known as Cochin Chinas, it is easy to see why the Rhode Island Red is a calm and friendly breed of chicken. Unlike flightier breeds of chickens such as Mediterranean class breeds, the Rhode Island Red is calm and non-flighty, making them a pleasure to work with. While an occasional Rhode Island Red male can show some aggression, the hens are easy to keep and handle. As well, being a calm breed, they handle confinement well for those who have problems with predators or limited range for runs.

While any caging should provide ample space, the Rhode Island Red will not suffer from confinement as many flightier breeds do and they will still provide their wonderful brown eggs in abundance. This makes them especially suitable for urban and suburban settings where space is at a premium. For those lucky enough to have an area where their flock can free-range or who have the space to allow for large runs, the Rhode Island Red is a scrappy survivor that can forage for their own sustenance and their colors blend well in natural settings to provide them with camouflage against predation.

The beautiful, rich red-brown coloring of the Rhode Island Red is visually its most distinctive feature. Males and females are both cloaked in a rich, deep reddish brown feathering with black feathers found in the wing, tail and neck feathers. While the tone of red-brown can range from a dark cherry or mahogany red to a brighter and lighter orange-red, all examples are beautiful and eye-catching. For exhibition purposes, the darkest tones are most desired. Some show lines are so dark that they actually appear to be nearly black. Production lines, more commonly seen and more regularly available, tend to be a brighter shade of orange-red that is to many observers actually more attractive than the exhibition coloring.

Whether you choose to obtain exhibition or production Rhode Island Reds will depend on the reason you wish to own and raise them. For those who wish to produce eggs, the production lines will be the obvious choice, and these lines are much easier to locate while being less expensive to purchase. Exhibition lines, while showing perfect confirmation, may show slightly less production value, are more difficult to locate and are often more expensive to purchase. Whether you choose exhibition or production lines, the Rhode Island Red will remain an excellent choice either way.

As the popularity of poultry keeping continues to increase, more and more people will be looking for the best poultry breed to match their needs. The Rhode Island Red is an excellent choice. Through the unique way that the breed arose and the genetic diversity that the breed maintains due to its origin, the Rhode Island Red has much to offer in a wide range of environments. The breed has been popular for over a century and is still produced in large numbers making them vigorous, hardy and readily available. The combination of beauty, production and hardiness makes for a very appealing combination and will help to keep the Rhode Island Red popular for many years to come.
